The world of getting here is a world all its own. An early morning school bus is a jumble of feet, and books, and friends, all lightly laced with smoke. The parking lot is a land of flying gravel, loud talk, and lounging.

People press in warm, crowded halls, or blow across the winter quad with hair in their eyes. Spring brings slow saunters and talk to the outdoor halls. These are the places of mulling and mixing.

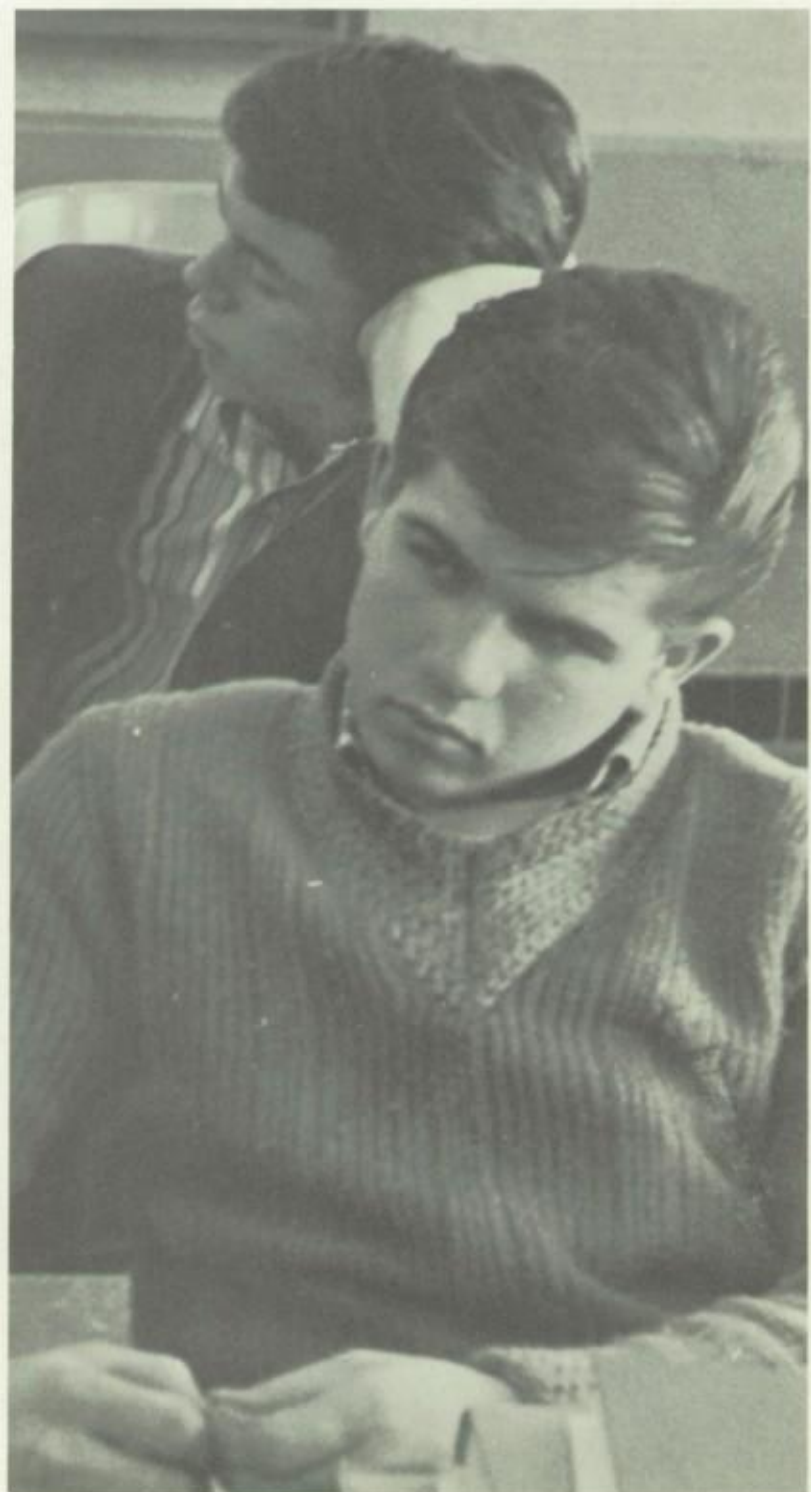

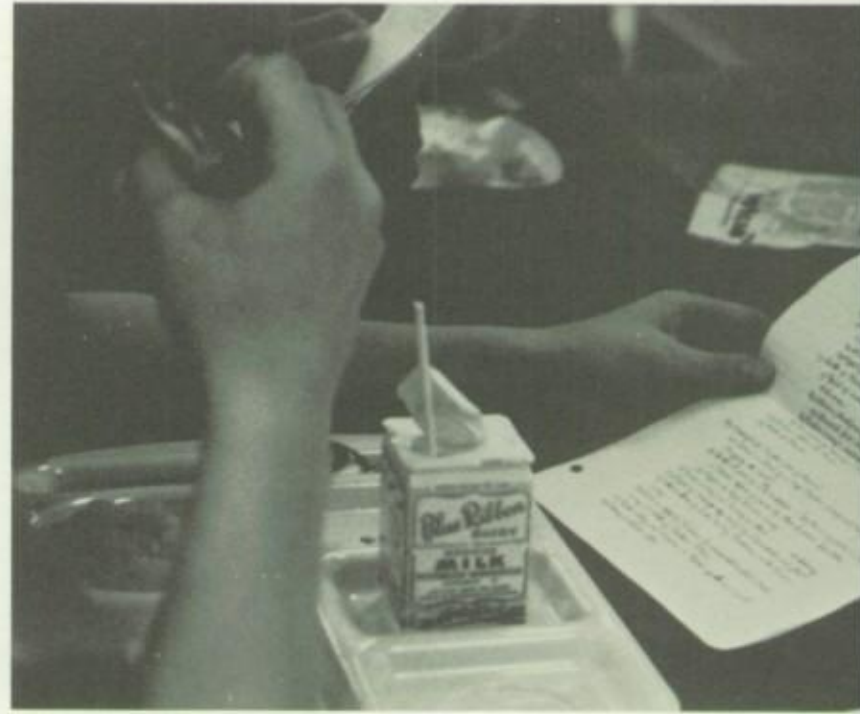

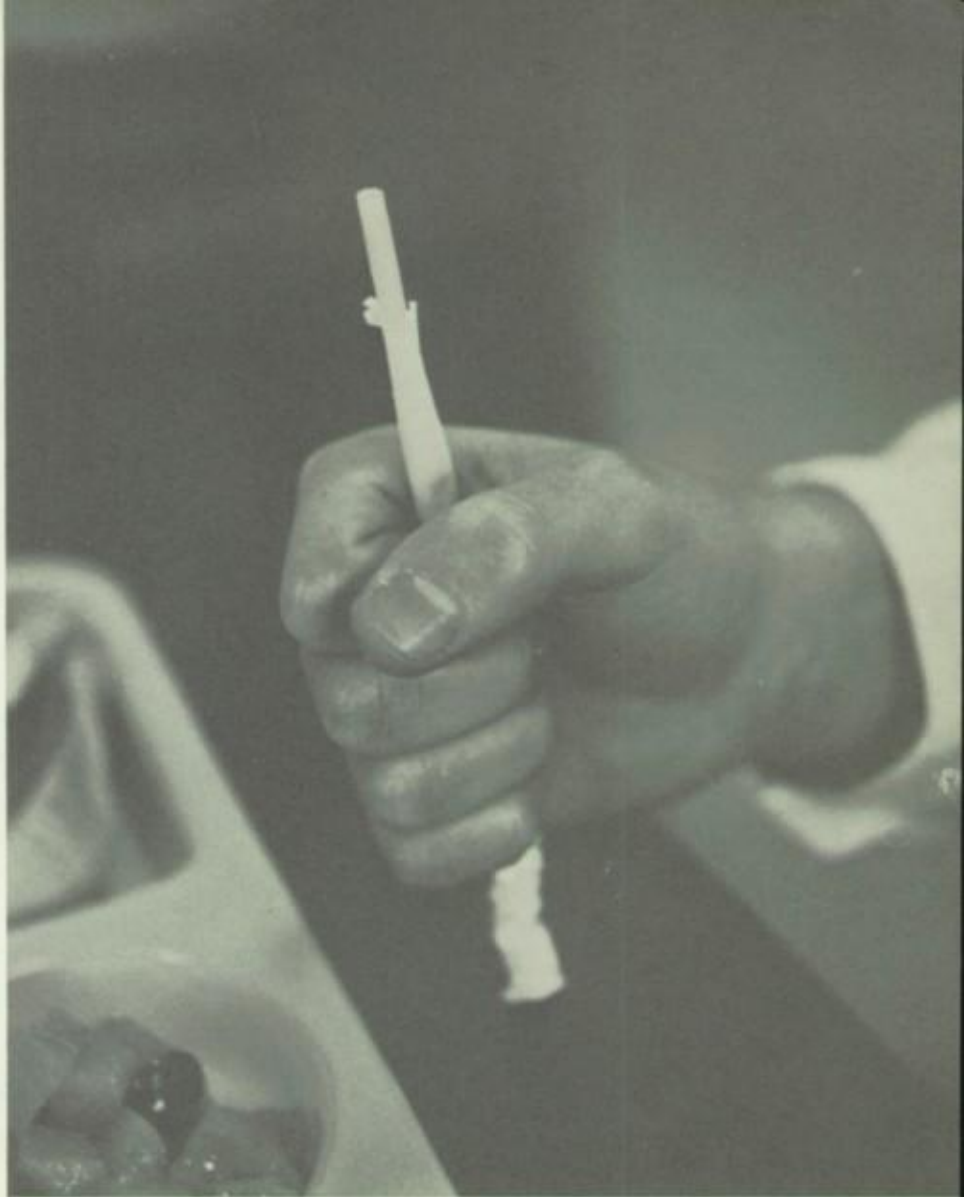

A classroom is five neat rows of desks to squirm in, a place where feet stretch across aisles and wrap around chair legs. It is a place where brows furrow and faces laugh. Learning is the work of living.

Fourth period means lunch and the cafeteria—the land of long, slow lines and flying straw wrappers. This is the time for contented complaining about the food and quiet trips to forbidden units.

A lav is a humid, gray place at the end of the hall. It is a place to put hair back in order and collect gossip, and it is a room of smoke and conspiracy. It is a place to daub on a beauty spot or drive home a date for a history quiz.

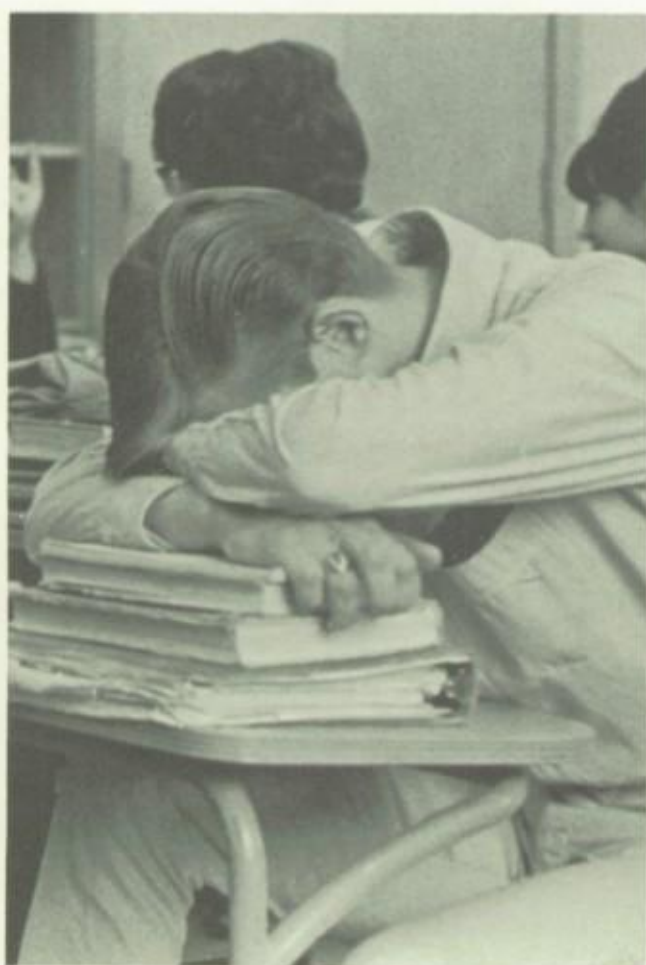

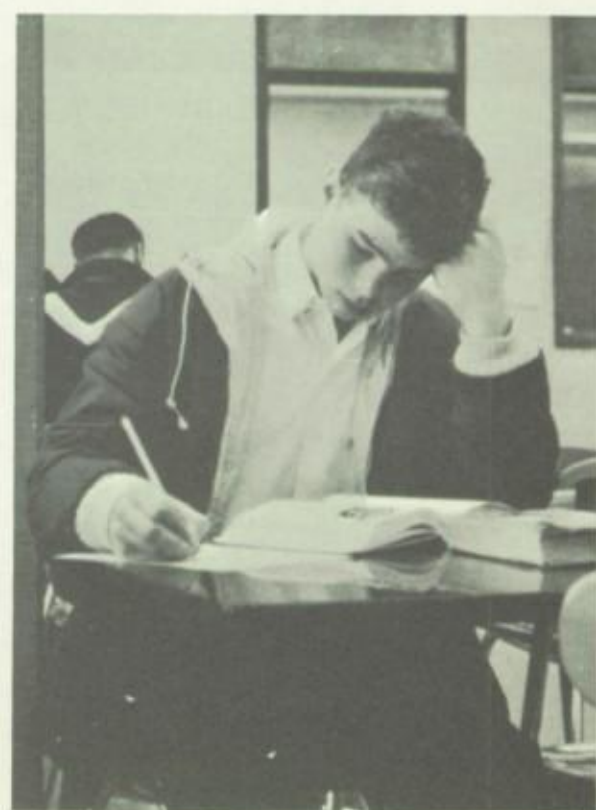

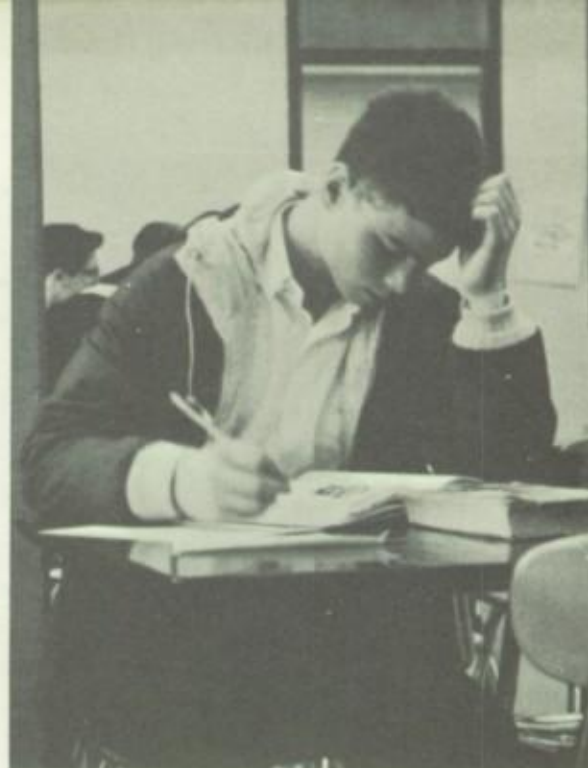

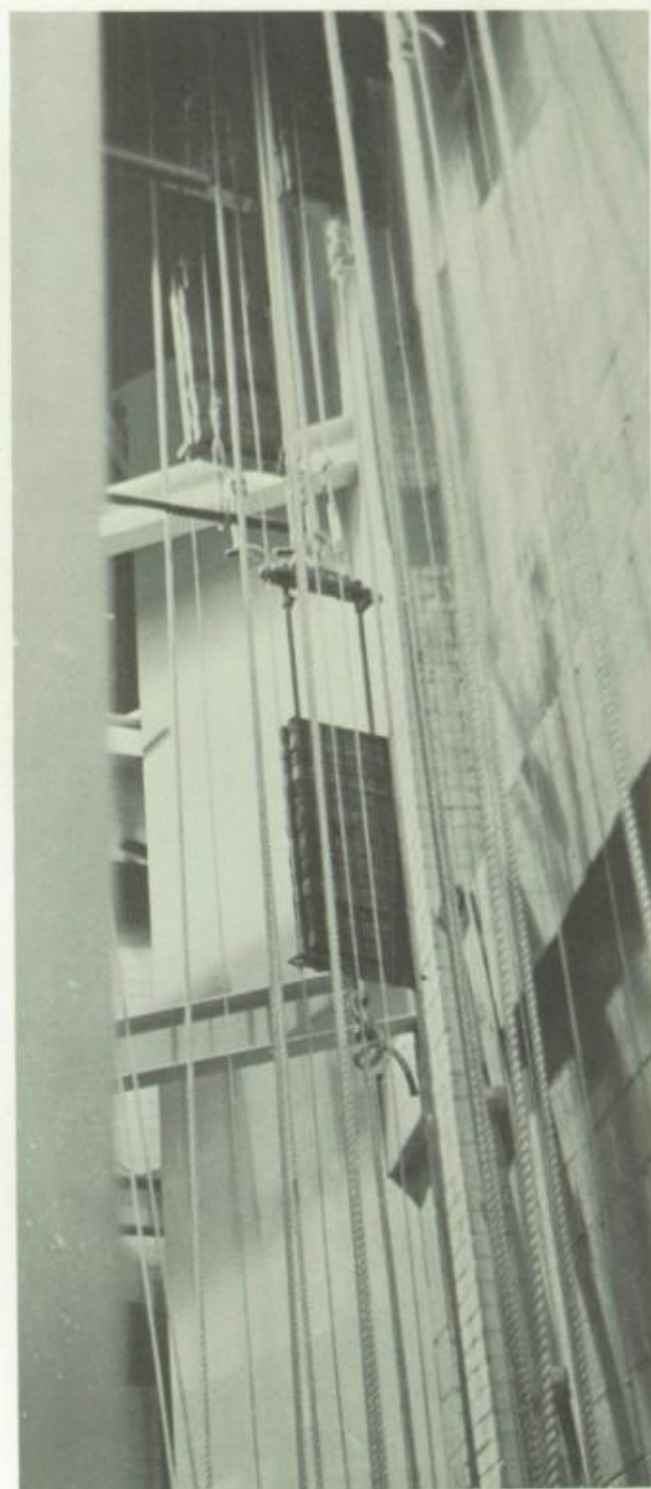

The afternoon drags into study halls. People read, take notes, or sleep. Doodles intertwine and cover a page. A pencil is engraved with tooth marks. Studies are a place for deep thoughts and day-dreams.

The auditorium is a mixing place, a place where hundreds sit in shadows, and a few stand in the light. It is a place of hushed darkness and soaring sound.

"Every February certain juniors and seniors, who exhibit the qualities of service, character, leadership, and scholarship, are inducted into the National Honor Society," stated the School Committeeman. "James Smith," announced the speaker, followed by rustlings and murmurings of surprise from the audience. All watched as the boy slowly walked to the stage to receive his certificate and pin.

Old and new officers of the Prom-Manaders board

Prom-Manaders holds its annual Pigskin Prom

The gymnasium had turned into a madhouse after being taken over by the Prom-Manaders board, who were decorating for their dance that evening. "Where's the stapler?" screamed the boy teetering on the ladder. "Get that centerpiece straight," called a voice from the corner of the gym. Getting the crepe paper tent up was a major crisis because the centerpiece kept getting tangled in the tent. In the corner a group of guitarists could be heard banging out the chords of "Pipeline." "Did anyone order the ice for the tonic?" hollered the boy from the ladder. That evening the confusion had disappeared and the gym had taken on a mystical air. Very efficient-looking people sat at the front door selling tickets. The boy who had been on the ladder could be seen introducing the chaperones to one another. Around the front door multitudes of students were waiting to get in.

managing the media

The publication's business, photography and circulation staffs were meeting in G23 to discuss finances. The scholarly looking boy running the meeting spoke of the need to conserve on expenditures. "I am very pleased with the new organization of the publications," he reported. "Cooperating with each other, the staff has managed subscriptions, distribution, and advertising for the High Spot, Focus, and the Spirit of '65. The typists have another copy deadline coming up and the photographers can pick up their assignments before they leave."

Hail, hail, the gang's all here. Business Staff

Phew, we can't print that. Give it to Focus. High Spot Staff

As he raced into the crowded Publications Office, the frantic High Spot editor screamed, "Hurry up with that paste-up, or we'll never get this paper to press in time. Who cut up the editorial copy?—the whole middle section is missing. Stop drawing all over that blackboard and come help. Look out, look out, you just spilled ink on the cartoon . . ."

The blackboard of G23 was covered with little witticisms while the Focus staff sat sprawled on the floor, engaged in a brain-storming session to think up a theme for the Spring issue of their literary magazine. "No, no," cried the editor, "we've already done morality to death!" Desperately she called for the staff to think harder and search their souls. The new sixteen-page format was making quite an impression, displaying the creativity of LHS's art, photography, and literary talents . . .

Heh, no wonder High Spot sent it to us. Focus Staff

You mean she even signed this? Yearbook Staff

"Where's the copy scale?" shouted the tired girl, trying to make her voice heard over the chattering of other yearbook editors and three typewriters. Each deadline found D1 in chaotic clutter—strewn with people, paper, pictures, and layout sheets. On this Friday lights could be seen until 9 PM as the editors paced the floor with strained looks on their faces. "Is this a contest among you people to see who has the most left to do?" asked Mrs. Rosenbaum, who had just returned from Friendly's bearing hamburgs and cokes. "You can't possibly come back Saturday morning," she stated inexorably . . .

The girls hair bobbed up and down while she cantered around the ring. Before taking to the bridle paths she wanted to exercise her horse. Soon the Equestrian Club would start practicing jumping.

"Bend your knees, bend your knees. Now turn!" cried the girl in the colorfully flowered parka and stretch pants. The Ski Club was sponsoring lessons at the golf course for all members wishing to improve their style. On one slope, the Junior Ski Club could be seen practicing some fundamentals of the sport, while the Senior Club members on another slope were performing more intricate techniques . . .

Several afternoons a week, members of the Chess Club can be seen engrossed in a game in the D unit cafeteria. "Chess is an art, a winning combination you have created," explained one member to another. "After you learn how to defend the king, we will concentrate on giving you experience to win matches with other schools" . . .

If he only knew! Chess Club

But, honest, I paid when I came in the first time. Varsity Club

As soon as the girl entered the basketball game, she was approached by a tall boy donned in an immaculate white letter sweater decorated with a blue and gold arm band. "Would you like to buy a program?" he asked. "All proceeds go to the Varsity Club's scholarship fund." "How can I refuse?" she asked, as she reached for her wallet . . .

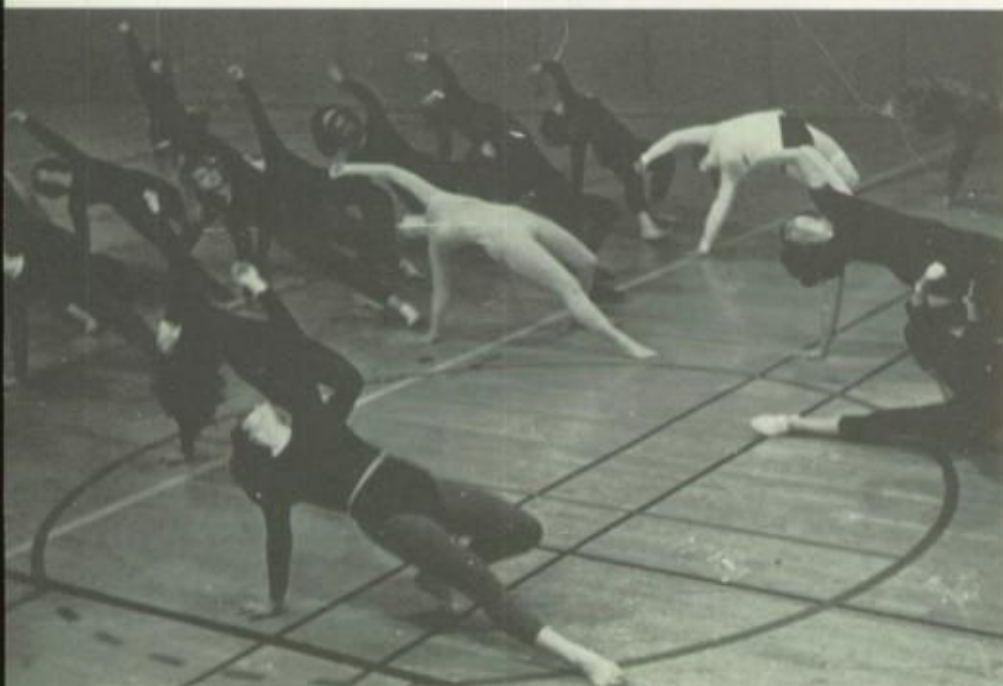

In one part of the field house a girl gracefully vaulted over the "horse." In a distant corner, another girl was "skinning the cat" on the ropes. On the basketball court, the boys were engaged in a rough game of basketball while other members of the "gold group" could be seen sprinting their five laps on the track. This is the Student Leader's Corp work session. The Corps is a new gym program offered at LHS this year. Modern Dance warms up

Clad in her black leotard, black tights, and bare feet, the willowy black-haired girl moved gracefully to the beat of the drum. Rehearsals were important now, for Mrs. Anderson was helping to prepare the Modern Dance Club for the winter gym demonstration and the A.F.S. dance. Creating their own dance patterns, the girls had composed a dance using percussive, sustained, and locomotor movements. As Mrs.

Anderson said "Focus," the girl's eyes sought the floor . . .

Attired in clinging white levis, the tall lanky boy entered Room 153, which buzzed with eager art enthusiasts. Mrs. Theriault quieted the group so that the Art Club meeting could be called to order. Plans were announced for the annual jewelry sale which would benefit the scholarship fund. "Possibly," thought the lanky boy, "I could win the scholarship if . . ."

I concentrated more on that sketch I started at home. His thoughts now turned to that fun-filled field trip to Rockport, held at the end of the year. Maybe this year it wouldn't rain and he could get a tan . . .

Mr. Nick surveys Drama Club props for forthcoming productions

Taking a rest from his sax, the boy ran his comb through his Princeton cut. The Dance Band was having a jam session with the Henchmen in preparation for its dance. Its full vibrant sound and fast rhythm made the Dance Band a hit. The students had wildly reacted to their Beatle selection. "She Loves You," played at the last dance. "All right boys, back to work." Eagerly the boy placed his sax again to his lips . . .

Backstage the girl donned her veiled headpiece and patent leather shoes. Around her people madly reviewed their lines. Excitedly she conversed with her friend before the production of "American Dream" . . .

Scurrying to her seat, the tall nearsighted girl just made it before the bell rang. Mrs. Humez was already returning last week's papers to her Creative Writing class. The girl could not wait to receive her paper, for Mrs. Humez always wrote lengthy critical comments. When she got her paper, the girl quickly read the comment and to her delight, Mrs. Humez had suggested that she send her paper to a magazine . . .

The boy with his shirt hanging out and the girl with her hair falling in her eyes, both signed up to attend the Boston premier, A Touch of the Poet. Under Mr. "Nick's" direction, the Drama Club was experimenting with a new program. About twenty members would attend the play, using season's tickets purchased by the Club. Next week there would be an actor and actress at the meeting to speak on the stage, costuming, and make-up. "Today," announced Mr. "Nick," "we must choose a play to perform at the State Drama Festival."

"Remember to deliver the film projector along with those three films," the dark boy reminded his colleague. "Mr. D just brought in the request." . . .

The girl, obviously new at L.H.S., timidly entered the Newcomers meeting. She had been looking forward to this gathering since she first heard of it. Maybe now she would discover what the "Spirit of '65" meant . . .

"How do you spell Oedipus?" asked the girl. Her job required that she be able to locate any and all books in the library, including those concerned with Oedipus and other non-existent people . . .

"Hey, you! Where do you think you're going? Get back in that row" bellowed the fat, diplomatic boy. He frowned as he remembered that his responsibility as a member of the assembly committee was to herd the multitudes into their rows . . .

Behind her typewriter the short girl tucked her hair back into a French twist. "Hurry up!" encouraged Miss Spidel. "Mrs. Bonney is waiting for her stencils." . . .

"How do I get to the girls' locker room?" asked the repair man. The office-aid, smiling, warned the bald-headed man that class was in session.

Tryouts begin for the operetta, "The King and I"

A thin girl whose face was almost hidden by her straight blonde hair and bangs sat with head erect, spine perfectly straight while the sounds by "Frostiana" echoed around her. She was proud to be a member of the distinguished Concert Choir even though it meant long hours of practice, and Mr. Vasil screaming, "Louder louder! If you people ever get this prepared for the Winter Choral Concert, it will be a masterpiece." Now she turned to

"Fugue in D Minor" by Bach, a favorite of Mr. Vasil's, being prepared for the Northeastern Music Festival. Thank goodness that wasn't 'til the spring; she wouldn't have to memorize it yet. "All right, open your mouths wider" said Mr. Vasil.

A tall boy with a young face pushed his glasses up on the bridge of his nose again and peeked into Handel's "Alleluia." Being a member of the Male Chorus had its advantages and disadvantages. It is enjoyable spending a whole period singing—it kind of broke up your day—and maybe this year he would make Concert Choir. Meanwhile he had to listen to Mr. Vasil banging out his part on the piano for the fifth time. . . .

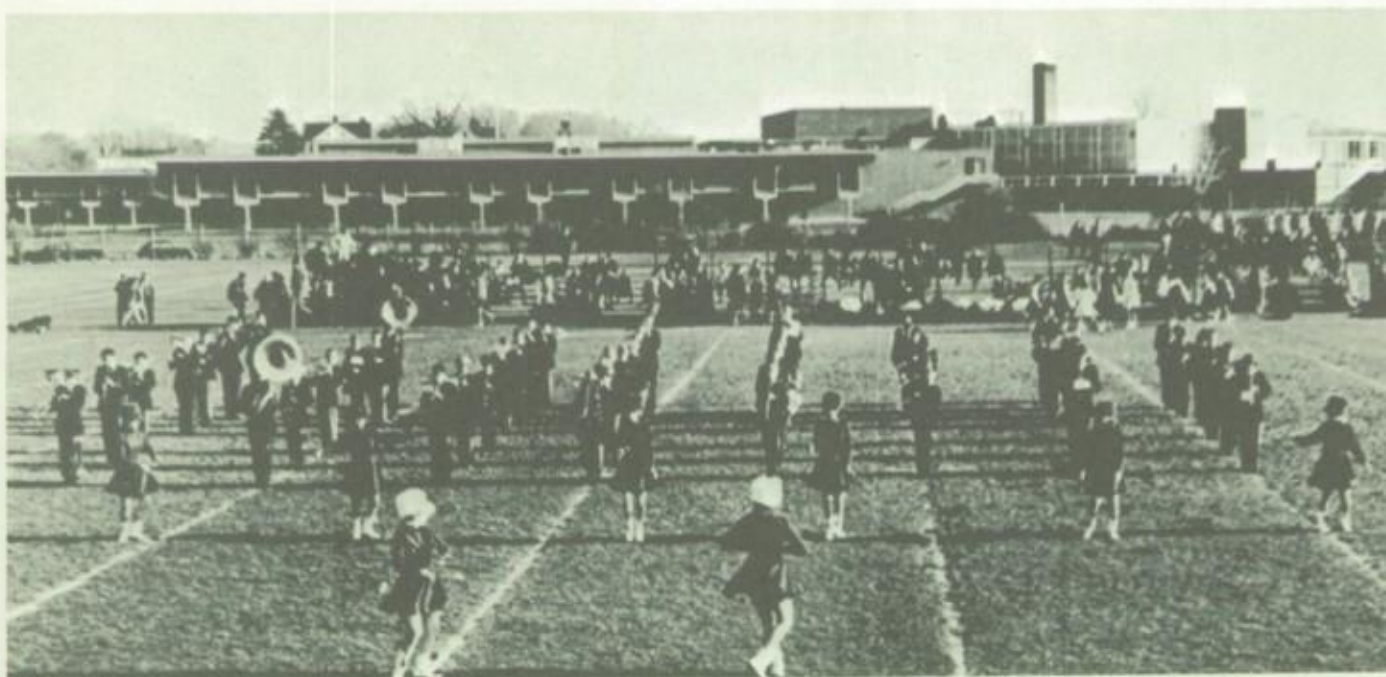

The girl with the blonde bangs turned her attention to the front of the room where Miss Kinyon was preparing the Girls' Glee Club for the first number they would be singing for the concert. Miss Kinyon, new to L.H.S. this year, seemed to pick the starting note right out of the air. The girl's eyes glowed and she lifted her head to sing "I Know My Love" . . .

Excitement was in the air of the music room, as the students filed in to try out for the Rogers and Hammerstein operetta, "The King and I." The thin blonde girl was trying out for Anna. While she looked over her music the tall boy was looking over the part of the "King." The girl knew of the grueling hours of practice which would be necessary to make the operetta a success. Her thoughts were suddenly interrupted by Mr. Vasil's vibrant voice, calling for all auditioners trying out for the Royal Dancers.

PEP SQUAD—Hey, gang! I think we're supposed to be on the other side of the field.

Strains of Washington and Lee flowed through the air as the stringy boy raced down the hall on his way to band practice. Stopping at the gym, he watched in awe as the majorettes strutted in precise form.

He was suddenly brought to reality as the bell pierced the quiet, and he knew he was late for band. Leaving the majorettes, he sprinted down the hall and slipped into his tuba. "Ready now!" commanded Mr. White. "You people will never be ready for Saturday's game."

After an hour of practice, he left M1 and went over to the G-Unit cafeteria where the Pep Squad was bellowing some new cheers. He was supposed to meet his girl at 3:20. It was 3:30 now. Peering around the door he admired the girls going through their paces, paying special attention to the blonde in the front.

Finally, Pep Squad was over, and it was 4:00. He glanced at the girls as they left, realizing only now that his girl was not among them.

Suddenly, he remembered that she had had orchestra practice this afternoon. He dashed to the auditorium to discover that practice was over and everyone was gone. Dejectedly he trudged toward the front door. There, hearing his name, he looked up and saw her waiting.

Nervously, the girl fumbled through her "Greek bag" as she waited to enter the living room for her A.F.S. interview. Ever since she had filled out her application, she had eagerly waited for this moment. Realizing the importance of the interview, she felt her heart beat madly as an adult motioned her into the next room. If she could only be selected as a finalist, she would be so proud to represent Lexington abroad . . .

The girl's long brown hair fell neatly down the center of her back as she demurely sipped her café au lait. Around her some of "Le Cercle Français" was practicing for its production of "Le Medecin Malgré Lui," while in another part of the room, members were engaged in an avid game of "Jouer au Carte." Turning her attention to the paper in front of her, the girl started her thank you note to the Petit Auberge, thanking them for the delicious meal they had served the club last week . . .

The Red Cross Club sat in a circle chattering as they worked. Pieces of brown paper lay around the room as they wrapped Care packages. "Make sure that string's tight . . ."

Holding a copy of Plato's Republic in the crook of his arm, the boy walked into a room filled with screaming Greek Academists. Mr. McElearnny was vainly trying to keep two ardent Greeks of differing views apart.

forming the future

Enthusiastically, the stocky girl boarded the bus outside F unit. The Future Nurses were going on a field trip to Burbank Hospital. As the bus started rolling, Mrs. Mogan and Mrs. DeScenza gave some details about the Silver Tea annually held in the spring. Donations from this tea would go to the nursing scholarship. Last week, student nurses from Mt. Auburn Hospital had given a talk. The girl dreamed of the day when she would be dressed all in white and standing beside a bed, prepared to aid . . .

Future Teachers flocked out of the A.P. room after viewing a film on teaching. The girl in the casual skirt and sweater stopped to speak to a small group congregated in the hall. "Gee," she said, "I always thought a good teacher was one who gave little homework and marked easily. It's funny but I'm beginning to think I was wrong" . . .

The short sandy haired girl was dressed in a jumper of the latest style. She listened diligently while a college representative explained admission requirements. Every meeting of the Young Moderns Club had been interesting and informative. Next week a speaker would be talking on hairstyling. This would be her opportunity to choose the hairstyle best for her . . .

"Where's the 612A conductor for model 739 output indicator?" a voice cried. Reaching into the pocket of his wool plaid shirt, the boy pulled out an intricate diagram of model 739. "Okay, I got it." "The transmitter must be finished by this Friday in order for our Radio Club to send Christmas greetings."

"Good luck to a great team, Dave"

Fall brings

From the fumble on the 3 yard line in the Belmont game to the called back touchdown in the dying minutes of the first half of the Concord game, bad luck plagued the Varsity Football squad.

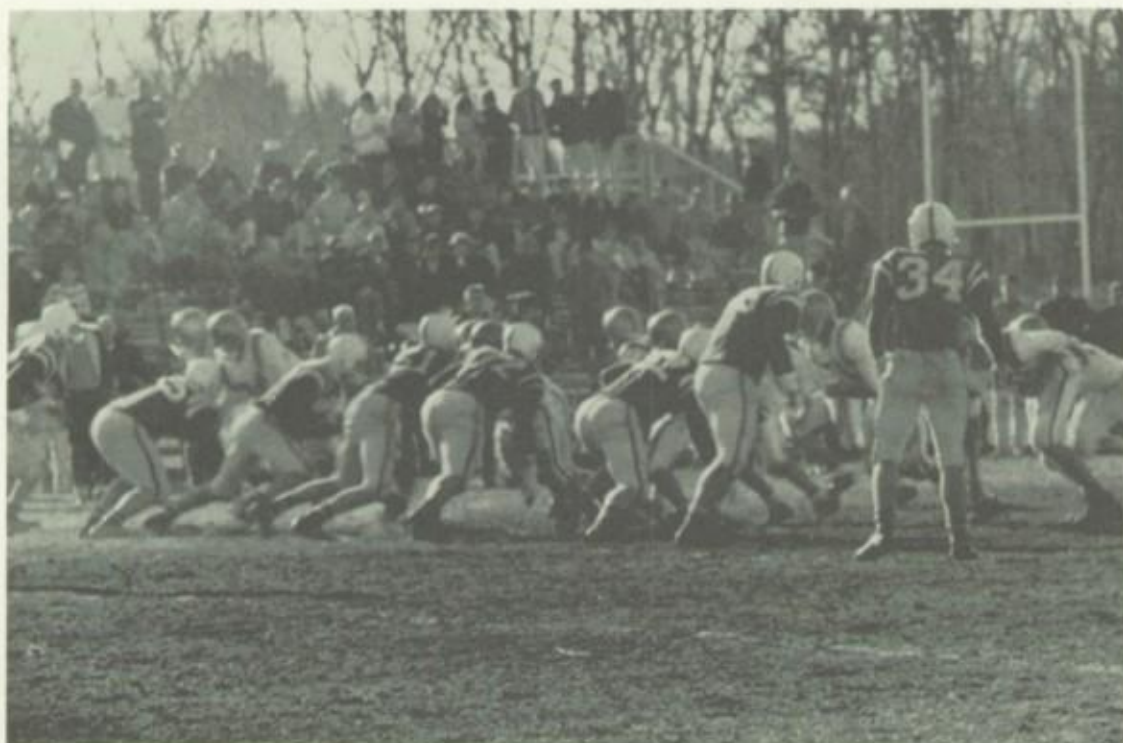

Although Tom Soderstrom and Bob MacLean passed like pros on occasion, the team depended mainly on a hard-driving ground game for its yardage. One of our Co-Captains, All-League halfback Tom Soderstrom, Carter Lyman, and fullback Dick "Juggernaut" Jenson were consistently outstanding.

FOOTBALL . . .

Although hobbled by injuries much of the season, Co-Captain Ben Freitas exhibited flashes of brilliance when called on to play offense and was the mainstay of the defensive backfield. Dick Jenson also proved his versatility by playing defense. Playing middle linebacker, he made many opposing quarterbacks wish they had never heard of football with his well-timed stunts and interceptions.

Not as star-studded as the backfield, the line was nevertheless directly responsible for some of the season's most exciting moments. Ends Lyndon Wilkes and Joe Murphy repeatedly made miraculous catches of third down desperation passes. Tackles Artie Klemm and Jim Passinisi, guards John Balazy and "Chip" Sullivan, and centers Tom "TK" Kennedy and Peter Hyatt teamed up to facilitate MacLean's 65 yard touchdown run at Newton South, Soderstrom's 80 yard gallop at Stoneham, and Jenson's 78 yard Houdini-escape against Concord. Peter LeBeau joined the line on defense, contributing to one of the best goal-line stand units in the league.

But What Brings Victory?

Only eleven men can play at a time, and the majority of the team spent their Saturday afternoons like this

Tom Soderstrom, Jim Passinisi, and Chip Sullivan hear about the mistakes they made in the last game

It was through no shortage of hard work or spirit that the team couldn't produce a better record. They always seemed to be just inches away from the first down, just a touchdown or less away from victory. A total of fifteen points spread out over the season could have changed the squad's record from 2-5-2 to 7-2, a fine slate in any league.

Two and one half miles on foot is a long way to go for a victory, but the Cross Country team was equal to the task. Leader of the pack for the Blue and Gold was Chris Drake, one of the most outstanding distance runners in the history of the school. Co-Captains Bob Lezer and John Biggs successfully imbued the team with spirit, an important factor in a sport that does not attract many spectators. Bruce Heller was credited with several excellent times, especially in some of the more important meets at the end of the season. Underclassmen Andy Biggs and Chuck McCormack impressed Coach Mel Downing with their hard work and improvement.

Highpoints of the season were the League and State Meets. The harriers finished fifth in the League and thirteenth in the State Meet, stunning several teams they had lost to in the course of the regular season.

They put the SOCK in

The '64-'65 Soccer team started fast, almost died, then finished in a blaze of glory. Often out-played, out-fought, and out-hustled, the team came close to quitting at one point. Hot against mighty Andover, a cold-streak plunged the team on a six game losing streak. The team did not give a true indication of its ability until the end of the season, humbling the previously undefeated Needham High team and trouncing Newton High, a team that went all the way to the semi-finals of the state tournament.

Defense was the team's forte. Backboned by goalies Kev Gaynor and Bill MODOONO, fullbacks Bob Anthony, Rusty Briggs, Chuck Hudson, Larry Johnson and Jay Wein, and halfbacks Al Besecker, Tom Hines, Paul Hayner, Rich Zeoli, Gene Grayson, and Jeff Wilson, the defense kept the opposing team's total to less than three in every game.

The front line was perhaps the fastest in the league with Sherrard Arch, Dan Nussdorfer, and Steve Wimberly frequently beating their men downfield, only to miss the scoring chance because of over-anxiousness. Juniors Lou Brouwer, Wayne Cram, Joe Godwin, and Det Suderow assure Coach Keith of an offensive nucleus any coach would love to have next season.

Looking back, the season was frustrating, but Coach Keith's antics, especially his lampooning the "typical LHS soccer player," kept it from being dull. Bruises, sprains, and cuts testified that the team really did have the "Spirit of '65."

The JV Booters compiled an amazing 10-3 record. A stingy, Coach Massimino-inspired defense which allowed an average of only two goals per game and a fast-breaking offense combined to keep the team in contention in every game.

Leading the offense were forwards Bob Lyng, John Herbold, Bob Dodd, Ted Carlson, and Bob Margosian. Goalie Harry Terkanian was the mainstay of the defensive unit, but he was given considerable help throughout the season by halfbacks Doug Prentiss, Jeff Sen, Dana Cobb and Carl Benoit as well as fullbacks Brian Cunha and Chick Roberts.

Stick with the FIELD HOCKEY, girls

Here we go round the mulberry bush . . .

"Dribble . . . dribble . . . dribble . . . drive!"—a handful of words that are going to stick by thirty-seven girls for a long time. Lexington's Field Hockey Teams ground through weary hours of daily practice for three months, and every day—dribble . . . dribble . . . dribble . . . drive!

This hardy admixture of girls composed a team that never stopped fighting. On the field new black and blues were continually inflicted and in games there were times when they almost collapsed from the exhaustion of racing up and down the field. Yet, the end of every game brought refreshments and a general stampede. This brief span of socializing, reflecting on the game, and eating, made every game, whether it ended in defeat or not, worth the effort.

Field Hockey was a drug, to which each member of the team became addicted. They developed a stubborn inner core which never allowed them to give up. The strident singing on the bus to the games, and the goodies after the games, were actually irrelevant. The desire to play and win, built up by daily practice, was dominant. This year their enthusiasm was demonstrated by the trophy they gave to their coach, Miss Levitt. This trophy symbolizes their unconquerable spirit, which forced them to fight, run, dribble, drive, pass, and win.

Cheerleaders are a special kind of people. They are wide eyed, all-American girls with wholesome, somehow sexy, voices that resound to the back of the bleachers and out across the field, inspiring "Our Boys" to victory.

They are a cross between the Senior Prom Queen and the future gym teacher types—completely uninhibited but never offensive.

Before a game they can be seen racing to the gym with uniforms, megaphones, and shakers flying, distributing pep pins and painting huge blue and gold posters in the main hall—almost simultaneously.

Ball - U - Man: Taking the

Inspired by Coach Massimino, the Varsity hoop squad forged one of their best records in recent years. Going undefeated for eleven games before losing to a fired-up Wakefield five, the team had the distinction of being one of the first in the Middlesex League to qualify for the Eastern Massachusetts Tourney.

A balanced offense and an impregnable defense were largely responsible for the team's success. The starting team was headed by Co-Captains Dave Aronson and "Rudy" Luongo, who often found themselves on the scoring end of Al Besecker's "thread-the-needle" passes. John McDonald was one of the team's leading rebounders, and his smooth jumpers from the foul line broke up many a zone defense. Probably the most versatile of the starting five was the 6'4" center, John Crisp. Besides being one of the best rebounders in the league, he also was among the leaders in assists and scoring.

Although infrequent starters, Steve Conley and "Leapin'" Lyndon Wilkes were often able to break into double figures in the scoring column. Bob Goddard, Kevin Gaynor, Tom O'Shaughnessy, Wayne Maguire, Lou Brouwer, and sophomore Ken Bixby proved that aggressive defensive play and team spirit didn't stop with the regulars. Besides stimulating opposing teams in practice, these players were able to put the ball in the basket when called to action.

Coach Tapply was able to call on experienced juniors Bill MODOONO, Steve Watson, Rich Jones, Artie Klemm, and Randy and Ricky Black to supplement the sophomores he introduced to high school basketball on the J.V. squad. Tom Henneberry, Trip Davis, and Bill Lunday improved greatly, and should provide next year's seniors with plenty of competition.

The Sophomore team didn't break many scoring, defensive, or attendance records, but it made its mark on High School basketball. By midseason, Coach Damiani had molded an unorganized group of sophomores into a smooth offensive unit and had created a scrappy "do or die" defense.

The team was certainly not lacking in talent. Brad Cardini kept the cords dancing with his honey-smooth sets and jumpers while Eric Nickerson and Paul Bellino picked the boards clean. John Peckham kept opponents and his coach bewildered with his blind passes. Jeff Cook was frequently called to action, and his variety of spins, fakes, and hooks gave many a coach ulcers. Brian Connell and Jerry Hruby did a great rebounding job in reserve roles. Teddie Carlson, and Franklin Rosa did a little bit of everything, while Carl Benoit, Jerry Bellows, and clutch player Roger Bevan did the majority of the playmaking. Peter Detwiller put the ball through the rim as often as not, and also got his share of assists.

The two freshmen teams coasted through the season, winning by such lopsided scores as 91-37 and 51-15. Coaches Hassard and Robbat drove their players hard, but were able to produce such outstanding players as Mark Bluestein, Joe Robbat, Jim Hayes, George Phelan, and Vern Catron. The successes of this year's freshman teams should bode well for the future of Lexington basketball.

The ball skittered down the court with a wild rush of girls in chase. The girls' basketball team was enjoying another game. Among the spectators a few boys cringed; they were glad they weren't down there. There must have been organization and co-operation in effect—despite the appearance of mass confusion—because the ball next appeared sailing through the hoop for another two points.

Led by Co-Captains Paul Fontas and Chip Sullivan, the LHS Hockey team recorded its best season since the turn of the decade finishing third in a strong league. Tom Soderstrom rounded out a front line which made life miserable for many a goaltender. The main factor contributing to the team's success was defense, and stand-outs Walt Spellman and Dave Pekins assured goalie Bob McCarthy of relatively trouble-free afternoons. Juniors Bud Gennaro, Joe Gallagher, and Rick MacDonald provided plenty of reserve power, as did Phil Quinn and Jim Ofria.

With the advent of Pee Wee Hockey in Lexington plus the addition of Junior Varsity and freshman teams at local arenas, Coach Keith seems assured of continued success in the future.

GYMNASTICS:

The Lexington High Gymnastics team made its best showing in its three year history in 1965. High points of the year were the defeats of Winchester and Wellesley and victory in the Middlesex League Championship meet. Winchester, Middlesex League champ for 1963 and 1964, was downed 119 to 107. Wellesley, who had never been beaten previously by a Lexington squad, was the victim of a 114 to 108 loss. This year's squad compiled a high score of 120 points, surpassing last year's record by more than ten.

Co-Captains Rick Hopwood and Joe Godwin were consistently outstanding, as were seniors Lyn Bixby, Bob Ahern, and Bob Trask. Underclassmen Don Gates, Steve Kelly, and Tom Amiro should provide Coach Todaro with a strong nucleus for next year.

Indoor Track was a new sport to Lexington and the Middlesex League. With ideal practice facilities at its disposal, the team was quickly forged into a unit dedicated to hard work, obedience, and citizenship by Coach Lord. Despite its mediocre record, the team was a juggernaut. Coach Lord was brilliantly inspirational and never let the team lose its winning spirit. It had among the best in all the events: Levine in the Shot Put, Jenson in the 45 Yard Dash, Anthony in the High Hurdles, Smith in the 300, Lezer in the 600, Wimberly in the 1000, Biggs in the Mile, Drake in the Two-mile, and a Relay team of championship calibre. Depth was slow in developing and the first men often succumbed to illness, injury, or pre-meet jitters. However, at the end of the season, our squad was number one. The team was a team, win or lose, always fighting together. Perhaps overshadowed by other winter sports, the team did not cause much of a stir. However, come spring, Lexington's track men, seasoned and groomed into a fighting unit indoors, were ready to make quite a few people lift up their heads and take notice.

Bob Anthony provides a study in determination as he clears a hurdle in practice.

WRESTLING for wreckognition

Coach Janusas must be beginning to wonder how long his bad luck is going to last. His wrestlers had spirit to spare and plenty of aggressiveness, but too often found themselves on the short end when the final tallies had been made.

Co-Captains Bruce Heller and Joe Murphy were consistent point winners, but most of the other, less experienced boys found the going a bit rougher. Tony Zagzoug, Steve Spiers, Bruce Jason, Jim Passinisi, and Dwight Kramer wrestled brilliantly on occasion, but unfortunately, these occasions didn't occur often enough.
 One bright note was the experience gained by such underclassmen as Joe Wills, Ben Coffin, Eddie Batson, and Jack Young, all of whom should develop into fine wrestlers.

BASEBALL '65

Coach Todaro faces the unpleasant task of fielding a team in which only four of the starting nine have been tested in varsity competition. Pitcher Ron Melleby, ace of last year's staff, is back again, but for his other pitchers Coach Todaro must look to "Moose" Conley, JV graduate, and senior hurler Lou Ferracane. Leading backstop candidates include Rusty Briggs and Tom Caruso, both JV's a year ago.

At first base, .300 hitting Rudy Luongo will be backed up by Billy Modono. Joe Bisognano and Steve Conley will be battling it out for the right to play along side of Tom Soderstrom, varsity hold-over at short. Third base finds long-hitting Ben Freitas vying for the starting slot with defensive specialist Al Besecker. Sherrard Arch and Al Williams seem to be the best bets to flank Paul

Fontas, playing his last season as varsity center fielder.

What the team lacks in experience Coach Todaro hopes to make up for with hustle, and both he and the boys have high hopes of bettering last year's 5-9 record.

Bob Dowd

John Crisp, Coach Massimino, and Bob Dowd prove that track doesn't have to be all work beating a TRACK toward the title

Thanks largely to the indoor winter track program, the outdoor Track team should be one of the strongest ever. Because of the great depth developed indoors, the boys should be able to get in the blocks every time confident of at least a second place.

Although disappointed by mediocre records in '64 and indoors, Coach Lord should finally receive his due. His hard work and dedication have resulted in a team full of spirit, an important factor in any sport.

Seniors should prove largely responsible for whatever success the team might enjoy. Boys such as Rutherford, Jenson, Johnson, Wimberly, Lezer, Biggs, Levine, Curtis, Ward, Anthony, Kent, and Smith, many competing athletically for the last time, can be counted on to give their all for LHS.

Future teams may do as well or better, but this year's squad won't be forgotten. A driving will-to-win, an almost mysterious esprit de corps seems to pervade all meets and practices, creating a situation that can only be attributed to Coach Lord and "the Spirit of '65."

power . . . the key to GOLF '65

A combination of experience, ability, and a favorable schedule should bring LHS one of its strongest golf squads in recent years. Returning veterans include George Jamgochian, Tom Kennedy, Don Shaw, Tom Peckham, Mike Garrity, Steve Watson, and "Young Eddie" Martin, all of whom played steady golf last year. Coach Janusas, himself a fine golfer in the off-season, will probably round out the squad with such players as "Slammin' Sam" Baker, Joe Wills, Jack Young, Steve "Mac" McElman, and Paul Garrity. Luckily, Melrose and Wakefield will each only be met once during the season, assuring Lexington of a spot at or near the top of the league standings.

TENNIS: big racquet in the Middlesex League

Although undefeated in Middlesex League action last spring, the LHS Tennis team is not content to rest on its laurels. Most likely bets as singles players are returning veterans Peter Clark, Gene Grayson, and Glenn Davis, all of whom spent much time during the winter tuning up their games at Middlesex School in Concord. The two doubles combinations will probably be chosen from among Rich Zeoli, Greg York, Brian Hyde, Rick McDonald, and Dick Hinchcliffe.

Likeliest challengers to Lexington's net reign seem to be Belmont and Winchester. Brookline and Boston Latin, recently added to the schedule, should also provide stiff competition. As far as Coach Frank Flynn is concerned, however, the experience of the LHS players should be the deciding factor, giving them a better than even chance of copping the league title for the second straight year.

Gene Grayson, Rich Zeoli, Peter Clark, and Glenn Davis sharpened up their doubles techniques over the winter at Middlesex School in Concord

Playing The Field — SOFTBALL '65

The girls cascade out of the bus and onto the softball diamond. Bags of equipment are distributed, and the catcher is strapped into her chest protector and face mask. After a brisk warm up, a quick pep talk from Coach McDonald, and a perusal of the opposing team, the girls take their places on the field.

Once the game has begun, any earlier tensions rapidly disappear. A homerun redoubles the girls hopes for a landslide victory, while an out or a foul ball merely impedes the team spirit temporarily. The time speeds by and the points mount up. With two outs and in the final inning, a Lexington batter is up. A strike, a foul, a hit, and a run. She slides into home amidst dust and sweat, adding another bruise to her leg. The team flies from the bench, swamping the happy dirty homerunner. Shrieks of joy pierce the air.

EEK, I'll never make it to first base in time!

Even before the remnants of March's snow have disappeared, the Girls' Tennis Team has begun its season of indoor practice. The slow process of reconditioning commences and the unsteady strokes are strengthened and improved. Soon, the outdoor nets are set up and the real grind of practice gets under way.

Tennis practice means fun and frustrations. Coach Anderson shouts, "Follow through!" and slowly the strokes become more accurate and powerful. The girls find their muscles beginning to respond to the skill of an even stroke.

The scene shifts from practice to actual matches. The dingy lifeless practice balls are replaced by fuzzy white ones that leap into the air. A long reach for a backhand in the far corner, a quick jump for a sneaky net shot, and a smoothly stroked forehand, all mark a sure victory for the team.

Forty-love. Complete silence dominates the court as the opposing first singles player serves. The tense hush continues until Lexington finishes up the game. Only one more game to win the set and the match!

CLASS OF SIXTY EIGHT

When we were first told about moving to the high school after the eighth grade, our reactions certainly differed. Some of us were deathly afraid of the juniors and seniors; we did not want to be scoffed at by our "superiors." The majority of us were anxious for a change of pace and for the opportunity to be with the older set in a new environment.

Our first day proved very discouraging. There was mass confusion and the disappointment of not finding our old friends within walking distance. However, not long afterward we contrived several different ways to find our friends; such as eating in C unit, or going to the library during every free block. We finally settled into our new routine.

Basically, the students were the same. The same group of unkempt girls wore their hair teased, their skirts short, and their make-up heavy, while the majority of girls appeared more refined. The boys' groups were also the same. Some remained in tight pants and black boots and the rest in loafers or desert boots, Levis, and sweaters.

Despite the many problems we must cope with, we are looking forward to next year when we will no longer be referred to as "little freshmen."

CLASS OF SIXTY SEVEN

OFFICERS

Louise McDevitt, Treasurer; Phil Cavaretta, President; Peter Kelly, Vice-President; Margo Jones, Secretary.

The sophomore of 1964-65 enjoys a status usually denied the LHS sophomore. He is not at the bottom of the social scale. The obliging freshman now suffers all the indignities of the lowest class.

Along with everyone else, this year meant breaking in (or just breaking) new equipment, new methods, new teachers; suffering without school lunch-eon until peanut butter sandwiches in brown bags were a loathsome sight; acquiring a tan from stewing under the shadeless picture windows; strolling into class late without the usual apprehensions. (You could always blame tardiness on icy walks.)

Being a sophomore means being too old to ride a bike and too young to drive a car. It means getting colds, forming cliques, and dissecting frogs. It means the discovery that rivals from the "other" junior high are human and maybe even fit to be elected to heatedly contested class offices.

Most of all, being a sophomore means no longer being considered a child. It means gradual initiation into the cool mystery of being a junior or senior, and looking forward to success in a three-year career at LHS.

CLASS OF SIXTY SIX

Ascending into the ranks of the upper classmen we left behind a year of topsy-turvy schedules and a split class. The junior is a split personality this year only because of his inhabiting D, E, and F houses.

Watching the underclassmen shrink, we could swear we were never that short only two years ago.

The junior races down the outside corridor, jumping puddles, waving at friends, only to find himself late to class or a club meeting again. With the confidence of a newly acquired license he slides behind the wheel of a crowded car. Trading PSAT scores and blowing up the chemistry labs are only part of the adventurous life of junior. At the end of the year a current of excitement charges ordinarily dull classes, and the Prom approaches.

CLASS OF 1965

THOMAS KENNEDY
President

WILLIAM SULLIVAN
Vice-President

CHERYL VIANO
Treasurer

JUDITH NASON
Secretary

The Class of 1965 probably saw more windows broken than any other single class in Lexington's history. We saw a lot more than that, though. We saw the high school grow from big to huge, spreading from one building to four, with a field house in the bargain. We saw it become more of an institution and yet somehow more personal. Our senior year brought us into a new school, a school with a new legal system. Suddenly we had to separate the food waste from the paper waste—and we didn't. We had to eat in our home units and forget where our friends were—and we weren't about to. We dumped any trash in any trash barrel, wore levis and short skirts, and ran the lunch blockade whenever possible. The Class of '65 may not have had much pep-pin spirit, but it had a spirit of sensible, quiet rebellion. But a school is never all rebellion. Even after that superior, bored senior feeling had set in, once in a while, as we stared out the window, something a teacher said would make all the loose ends knit together. And then we felt a certain glow of understanding, and knew why we were here.

And after the 2:20 bell, for a lot of us, there were things to do. The tinny music started in the gym, and the majorettes started twirling. The basketball team meandered towards the locker room. The senior play, on a bare stage, ground through the same scene for the twelfth time. And about 4:30, we'd grumble our way home with a martyred look—and know we'd come bouncing back the next day for more.

There was no one look for the Class of '65. There couldn't be because it was made up of 509 different people. Some wore their hair teased, some wore it long and straight. Some people used book bags, and some didn't carry books at all. There were Ivy League sweater sets, and lettermen sets. Engineer boots and loafers.

We aren't leaving this school as one unified group. We couldn't. We're too different. But we are leaving it with something in common. We have spent three years rubbing shoulders in the halls, the lunchrooms, the lavs, and the locker rooms. As a group we have seen the provincial conservatism of Lexington soften under the steady stream of new teachers, students, and ideas. People in our class have traveled over half the globe. Others have found love and hate here at home. We have seen death at close range: three of our classmates and a President have died within a year. All these things have molded and marked us. No other school could have produced quite the same group. No other group at the same school could even be quite the same. We are the Class of '65 in Lexington, Massachusetts and no one else can ever be that again.

you can't take it with you

They say "You Can't Take It With You," but the senior class came away with everyone's funny bone for their performance of Moss Hart's and George Kaufman's famous comedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Sycamore, played by Phil Christensen and Roberta Kelley, lived during the depression with their nutty family which included Luellen Lannom, Elaine Koury, Paul Moates, and Greg York. Adding confusion to the household were Ron MacGarvey, Lez Pendergast, and Chris Colbourne. Also in the play were Peter Clark, Les Tarbox, Ben Nickerson, Dick Curtis, Arthur Fitzgerald, Barbara Hanrahan, Nancy Butters, John Rutherford, David Radcliff, and Richard Paris.

The cast romped through a series of misadventures and misconceptions, to the delight of a full house both nights of the performance.

"An Evening in Spain" was the theme for Noche del Amor, the Senior Prom, held on November 20, 1964. Seniors and their dates danced from eight to twelve midnight to the music of Herbie Wayne and his well-known orchestra. Burgundy, black and white streamers transformed the gym into a gay Spanish villa. Tables skirting the dance floor, where couples gathered to chat, gave the impression of an open, garden scene, while refreshments were served in the lobby, buffet style.

Highlights of the Prom included the crowning of the queen, Elaine Russo, and her court, Les Tarbox, Judy Van Alstine, Sandy Gilbert, and Ellen Fogler, who reigned from a throne backed by a black and gold lace fan. Any senior would agree that this was one of the most memorable nights of their senior year.

This year Lexington High was a new school. It wasn't the same red-bricked house of learning that it had been for ten years. It was a new, sprawling complex. So much of the school had changed that we felt the yearbook should change. There had never been a name for the yearbook. Now there is—Spirit of '65. It is more than just a Lexington battle-cry, it is the basic idea behind this yearbook. Every year has something unique in it, and a yearbook should try to capture that something. We changed quite a few things to get more of the spirit of '65 into this book. We have more candid shots. We have more shots of real people doing real things because we cut down on mugshots. We have a different yearbook. This yearbook is distinctly the Spirit of 1965, but it is also a pace-setter for the future. The 1964-1965 school year is not an entity unto itself. It is a link in the chain—the theme of our new cover. Much has been changed, and much will be changed. But more things—the cover, the name, the idea—will remain, just one link further down the chain.

The Spirit of '65 has been produced by Wm. J. Keller Inc. of Buffalo, New York. It is a product of the Keller Veltone Lithographic process. The pages are 80 pound White Anniversary Text with Gravure Green Ink for all printing. The end sheets are also printed in Gravure Green, but the paper is 50 lb. India Hammermill Cover. The text of the Spirit of '65 is set in Times New Roman type. Running heads are Times Italic. The hard-bound edition is covered with gold Monks Cloth with the design silk screened in royal blue. This book is one of an edition of 1125 books—525 hard-covers, 600 paper-bound.

Best of luck, be
A. Mc Dinichy
